The banking industry's eyes have been on banking in the last week, and FDIC always has its eyes on banking. Why are we so "visual"?

Therein lies this week's double challenge. The first part of this puzzle is a simple word search. In the puzzle above, find the names of ten men and women who have held the FDIC Chairman's gavel since

ABA BJ Puzzle of the Week: 10/01/04

F. D. EYE See—Part 2 (the hard part)

Who am I?

1978. Twenty-two executives have held this post since FDIC was founded in 1933, beginning with Walter J. Cummings. We're just asking you to find the ten most recent names. (Please note, two of the names are those of FDIC board member who served as "Acting Chairman" for extended periods.

To make life more interesting, we have put some other names, agency abbreviations, and more in the puzzle, to distract you.

Have you found the ten names? (You can find a list of all of the chairmen in FDIC's 2008 annual report, on www.fdic.gov.)

Now the hard part. Here are the ten sets of "eyes" that have been on banking since 1978.

From the word search names, match up ten names to ten pairs of eyes.

To submit this week's entry, please include two sheets—your completed word search and the "eye chart" here.

Fax your completed puzzle, with name, bank, title, and e-mail, by 5 PM, Oct. 7, to 212-633-1165, to participate in a drawing for a $25 Amazon gift certificate.

Good luck! scocheo@sbpub.com
