

Banking's Top Performers Part 2: banks under $3 bil.

Banks, savings institutions, and bank holding companies—S corp. and non S corp.

Last year was in many ways more difficult for community banks than the very large banks, as the economy reeled in the wake of the financial crisis. But as with the larger institutions, there was a great disparity of performance between the best and the rest. As described in the June print cover story written by Vanessa Mambrino and Nick Robin of Capital Performance Group, the top 25 community banks in all four size/tax categories did considerably better than the pool of all banks in those respective categories. (Summary statistics can be seen below.) This the authors attributed to the top banks' ability to continue to grow in a down year, either organically or by acquisition. Banks over $100 million tended to do more acquiring, often via FDIC-assisted transactions.

There is a great deal of additional statistical material presented online that could not be accommodated in print—for example, rankings at the charter level versus on a consolidated basis. See the complete list, below.
